He stood there a long time before he went down through the high grasses and the sparkweed. At the foot of the hill he came into a lane. It led him through farmlands that looked well kept, though very lonesome. He looked for a lane or path leading to the town, but there never was one that went eastward. Not a soul was in the fields, some of which were newly ploughed. No dog barked as he went by. Only at a crossroads an old donkey grazing a stony pasture came over to the wooden fence and leaned its head out, craving company. Medra stopped to stroke the grey-brown, bony face. A city man and a saltwater man, he knew little of farms and their animals, but he thought the donkey looked at him kindly. I had the urge to tear from the wall the microphone that was inclined with such solicitude from other witches and from sorcerers, not from wizards. What we teach here is in a language not. They began, however, with the peaches. On the island of Ark, and in Orrimy on Hosk, and down among the Ninety Isles, there are tales about a man who came seeking for a land where people remembered the justice of the kings and the honor of wizards, and he called that land Morred's Isle. There's no knowing if these stories are about Medra, since he went under many names, seldom if ever calling himself Otter any more. Gelluk's fall had not brought Losen down. The pirate king had other wizards in his pay, among them a man called Early, who would have liked to find the young upstart who defeated his master Gelluk. And Early had a good chance of tracing him. Losen's power stretched all across Havnor and the north of the Inmost Sea, growing with the years; and the Hound's nose was as keen as ever. "But she was only a girl like the others, too," Mead said, and hid her face. "A good girl," she whispered. He still stood there, and she said, "Look at the peaches! They're all ripe. We'll have to eat them right away." Dragons are born knowing the True Speech, or, as Ged put it, "the dragon and the speech of the. Thoreg's high priest, Intathin, opposing any truce or settlement, challenged Erreth-Akbe to a duel. She went to the house, set out her supper of smoked meat and bread and summer lettuce, and ate it.
